Introduction

As part of our QA course studies at the Gal Matalon Automation College,

We got a final project to do for a leading app.

The app we chose is "Pocket PassportCard".

The subject of tourism and aviation is very popular for us.

Each of us likes to travel the world and travel insurance is very important.

"PassportCard" is the leading insurance company in Israel for trips abroad and we have purchased insurance through them several times in the past, which is why we chose them.

In the current report we will review the application in its length and breadth and try to locate bugs that require treatment in order to create documentation for them later and association according to the severity of bugs.

How did we plan it?

First, we downloaded the app and connected to it.

In the first step, we tried to understand what the application is supposed to do and who its possible customers are.

In the second step, we performed end-to-end tests to make sure that the application performs its function from start to finish.

The end tests were purchasing insurance and loading a card.

We performed positive and negative functional tests to check that the application does what it's supposed to do and doesn't do what it's not supposed to do.

In the second stage, we divided the application by regions and performed positive tests on each region and in addition to that we also combined tests from the different regions.

In the fourth stage, we considered all the types of tests necessary for mobile.

We tested the proper functioning of the application on several devices and operating systems.
